Wonder Dog To Run In Feature Event Tonight

One of the "greats" of greyhound racing, Hastings, owned by Bud Holland, shakes off the cobwebs accumulated during a 35-day lay-off. Hastings, who will run in tonight's feature race at the El Cerrito Kennel club track.

After winning March 21, Hastings retired on his laurels, chiefly because other owners refused to let their dogs against this phenomenal hound, which won every time he started.

Now the owners have realized and Racing Secretary Johnny Greenwood has played the "wonder dog" in the hot box against G. Trotter, Shawnee Belle, Another Aristocrat, Andrew's Prize, Mike Andrews and By Himself.

If Hastings can win after this long lay-off it will surprise veteran observers, who believe the 70-pound hound will need a race or two before he can truly himself back in shape again.

OLD PEOPLE find way to keep breath wholesome

Halitosis (bad breath) quickly yields to Listerine, safe antiseptic and deodorant.

Either because of improper diet, food contamination, or the wearing of false teeth, old people frequently have halitosis (bad breath). No wonder others consider them a nuisance.

But now science has found that the regular use of Listerine will effect a complete cure of their bad breath due to the fermentation of their food on mouth, teeth, or dental plate surfaces.

This safe antiseptic and quick deodorant works quickly. It cleanses mouth, teeth, and gum surfaces. Kills fermentation and putrefaction, a major cause of odors, and then stimulates the oral mucosa.

Try using Listerine every two or three days. See how much more wholesome it leaves your mouth. How it sweetens your breath. Listerine. Listerine Co., St. Louis, Mo.

IN 1929, WHEN THE BOY SCOUTS WANTED A NAME FOR THE COLORED, PLAID CORD THEY WEAR AS A HAT BAND, SCOUTMASTER ROBERT H. LINK, OF ROCHESTER, N. Berkeley Will Continue Fight For Ship Service

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24—UP—A fight to force the continuance of steamship service to Berkeley was launched by the Berkeley Chamber of Commerce and the Berkeley Manufacturers Association here today.

These organizations, through Fred Hinchinson, city attorney, filed a petition with the California Railroad Commission, demanding a rehearing of the order, which permitted eight steamship companies to abandon Berkeley as a port of call.

The civic leaders charge that abandonment of service would work a hardship on the manufacturers of their city and that large service from San Francisco to Berkeley, suggested by some of the companies, was not provided for in the present rates.

Wood Back From Meeting At S. F.

Ralph A. Wood, manager of the National Re-employment Service for Contra Costa county, with headquarters in Richmond, has returned from attendance at a state-wide meeting held this week in San Francisco.

Wood stated that the attendance was remarkable inasmuch as no federal funds had been allowed and each person there paid his own expenses. Sixty gathered, some coming as far north as Humboldt county, and as far south as Imperial county.

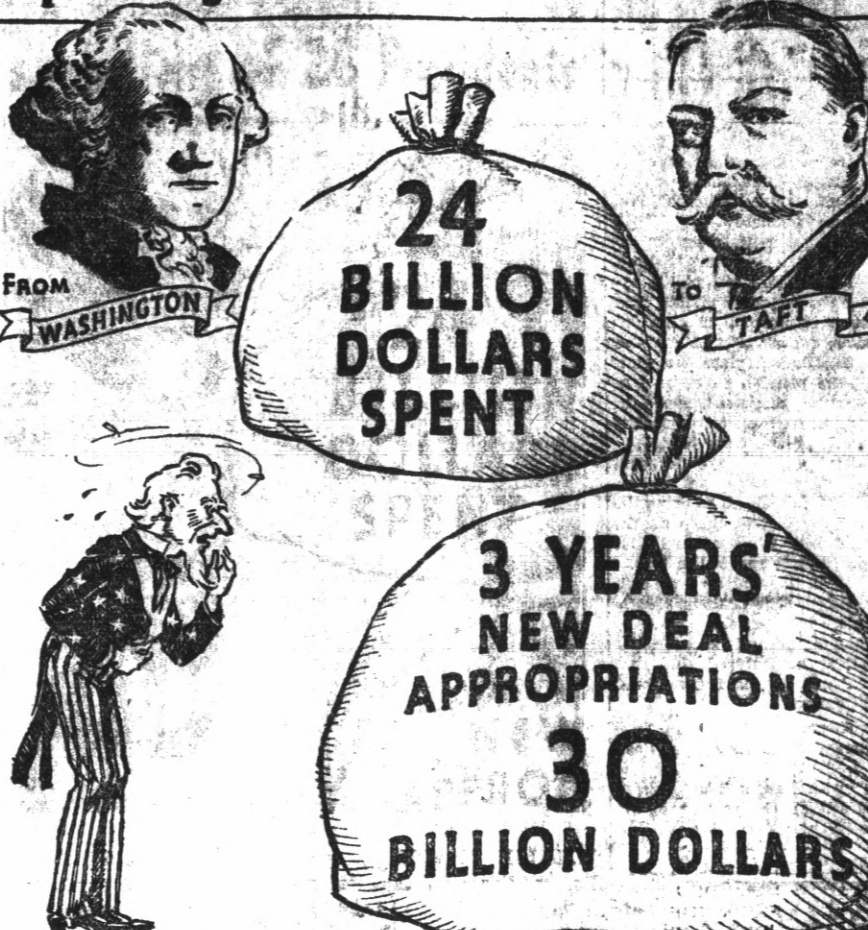

Matters under discussion included technical problems of free public employment office procedure, and a closer co-ordination with the federal agencies. Particular emphasis was laid upon the government's concentrated drive under way to reduce relief rolls by returning those persons who are eligible to private and public employment at prevailing wages through the offices of the National Re-employment Service.

New Deal Funds in 3 Years exceed spending of 26 Presidents in 124 Years

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has been given more money to spend in three years than 26 Presidents spent in 124 years, an orgy made possible only through submissive New Deal majorities in the Congress. Out of this Congressional surrender have come the dog pound with shower bath; the Florida ship canal; the "Quoddy" power idea, and other boondoggling devices quite as costly and of as doubtful value. One half of these billions have been borrowed. They will have to be repaid. Children yet unborn will groan under the tax load inherited from the New Deal and its Brain Trust.

COAST ILLEGAL OPERATION RING IS UNDER QUIZ

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24—UP—Disclosure of a coastwide illegal operation ring which has driven independent practitioners out of business tonight brought swift action by authorities from Seattle to San Diego to smash a racket taking a heavy toll of lives and money.

Unmarried women have paid the members of the ring thousands of dollars during the last year, often paying exorbitant interest rates when unable to offer cash for operations to avert childbirth, investigators claimed.

RING REVEALED

Dr. Charles Pinkham, secretary of the California Medical Board, revealed existence of the ring. He said its operators maintained one or more offices in each of the following cities—Seattle, Portland, Oakland, San Jose, Hollywood, Long Beach, Los Angeles and San Diego.

The story of the racket was a drab one, involving criminal and make-shift surgery, with "patients" hunting out back street offices and hospitals, interviewing doctors who masked themselves rather than reveal their identity, and paying on the installment plan.

DOCTOR HELD

Involved also was the traditional tip-off to criminal activities—a falling out among members of the racket.

One of the first breaks in the case came when Dr. Eric Wilson, formerly of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Shanghai, was charged with conspiracy to commit illegal operations in Seattle, Wash.

Blonde Charlotte Emborg, key witness in a manslaughter charge brought by the state against Groneman in connection with Miss Clemmons' death, disappeared yesterday. Alfred also was scheduled to be an important witness in his father's trial, postponed to May 2, when police reported Miss Emborg missing.

Groneman, a bald, voluble man with bulging veins in his neck and temples, was reported to have told various persons his son had gone to Chicago, and had enlisted in the

Jones traced the history of schools from the earlier days of army. Police opened an intense hunt for the boy and for Miss Emborg.

Cold Water Has Its Uses as a Corrective in Some Diseases

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

WE HAVE discussed some of the methods of using hot water for the treatment of diseased conditions. Cold water has almost as many uses and is of great benefit in various conditions. The most common use is for the purpose of reducing high fevers, but its use in relieving pain, congestion and inflammation locally or in deep tissues is very beneficial. It is also of great help in the form of ice packs for the control of bleeding from the nose, throat and lungs, cuts and possibly in hemorrhage from the lungs and in the brain.

For colds in the head, the throat and nose the alternating application of heat and cold is of great aid. A hot pack to the face and head, which relieves the congestion, followed by a cold pack to the back of the neck and the reverse of cold to head and hot to neck causes a pumping back and forth of the blood stream, which often stops the development of a head cold.

To Reduce Fever

The cold tub bath, using tepid water, instead of cold (with cold applications or ice bag to the head) can be prolonged as long as necessary. It will reduce high fever, relieve delirium and induce restful sleep. A cool sponging, allowing water to evaporate slowly, will not in the same way to a lesser extent, but is much easier to apply and does not alarm a delirious patient.

The wet sheet pack is extremely effective and easy to apply. With a rubber sheet on the bed, an entire sheet on several sheets can be wrung out of cold or tepid water. This is spread on the rubber sheet and the patient placed on this. Then the sheet is folded over one leg and thigh and tucked under, then the other leg. Then over the trunk and chest, snugly and around the arms and up over the neck and shoulder.

This can be covered with a light blanket or thin sheet and the patient allowed to lie in this pack and sleep or rest. Other cold applications should cover the head. This reduces temperature and promotes rest. For simple croup, use a towel folded to reach from the chin to the upper part of the chest, wrung out of ordinary tap water. A dry towel is folded over this and the pack changed to another as soon as it becomes slightly warm. This will relieve a severe attack of croup in five to fifteen minutes.

The internal use of tepid water for the treatment of stomach cramps consists of the slow drinking of four or five glasses of water. It may cause vomiting, but it will wash out the undigested contents of the stomach and relieve the pain and distress. To overcome chronic constipation, nothing is so successful and harmless as the drinking of large quantities of water. But it must be taken methodically. Drink slowly, four or four glasses of tepid water before breakfast.

Drink More Water

At first you cannot control your vomiting, but by drinking with one glass and gradually increasing from day to day it can be done. A little soda or lemon may be added. It will relieve a undigested food and leaves the stomach in a condition to digest breakfast.

During the forenoon, more glasses of water, cold or tepid, should be consumed. More during the evening and after dinner. Four glasses can be taken. It has become somewhat of a habit.

It flushes the kidneys, order and carries away poisons. Water is a good laxative. Externally it is a good skin treatment for itching.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Is it all right for friends to kiss on meeting in public place or on the street?"

ANSWER: There is an extreme for such demonstrations at a railway station or a pier, where friends and relatives meet to say hello or good-bye. But at a chance meeting on the street or in public place do not kiss. Reserve it for a time when there will be more privacy.

QUESTION: "What is the proper way to arrange for an appointment with a busy business man?"

ANSWER: You may call on telephone and ask for an appointment. If the man with whom appointment is desired has a secretary, the matter should be left up with her. This method is effective only when the caller knows the nature of his business.

For a stranger, it is best to write a letter. If he should state business briefly and ask to be granted an interview.

Mother of Six Helped With Prize Novel

By TALBOT LANE

Another housewife has done it. She is Mrs. Lester W. Jacobs, of St. Louis. Mother of six, desiring to "help out," she devoted her spare time to a novel and entered a contest conducted by a publishing house. Result, a prize of $10,000 and, of course, royalties.

It was Mary Roberts Rinehart, among modern American women, who set the pace of writing fiction with a typewriter on her desk and a baby on her lap. The case of Mrs. Jacobs, whose name on the book "The Old Ashburn Place," is Margaret Flint, is not a parallel because Mrs. Rinehart did not have six children when she began to write fiction.

Margaret Flint asked herself: "What can I do that is worth money?" Her answer was: "Write a novel." She wrote it. It was written in many short stories. Margaret Flint says: "But nobody wanted to publish them. Four years ago I started my first novel, 'The Old Ashburn Place,' about the Maine farming country where I lived as a girl. I re-wrote it half a dozen times, then sent it to a First Novel competition. When the telegram came telling me I had won, I was sitting at home with the family. It was the most marvelous thing that ever happened to me."

She worked in winter while the children were at school; in summer at night, when it was cooler. Her husband watched sympathetically, but he did not advise her. "It is hard for a man who is on a salary," Margaret Flint says, speaking of their determination to send the children through college. "I wanted to help my husband if I could."

She did help, cooking, sewing, cleaning. But, as she admits, she "never felt drawn to sweeping and washing dishes," and hoped to sell enough stories to hire a servant, although that came second, and the children's education first.

The neighbors were delighted with her success, she tells us, and the family was proud, all but the youngest, aged twelve. He said: "Mother, are you still going to love me, now you are famous?"

"You should be ashamed to ask," she replied. "I am your mother, remember that."

QUESTION: "Please tell me if creams are not harmful to a skin troubled with acne. I need a cream because my skin is dry and flaking and flakes off."

Marjorie.

Oil added to your skin will only make the acne worse. It will not improve your skin until you have a pure condition. Use a pure castile soap and wash your face daily.

Times in tepid and then very cold water will help tone the skin. Use the newly opened pimple with a little diluted alcohol to dry it. Then pat your skin with a protective and healing agent. For more details, send stamped self-addressed envelope a copy of my leaflet on Acne and Acne.

QUESTION: "Is it possible to remove dark spots left by a pimple? I have had a very bad pimple on my face, chest and back. It has left a dark spot. It has disappeared due to the fading of the formation of the spot, however, such scars can be concealed by a foundation cream or dusting of powder."

How to Get Rid of Hair Is a Problem

By JACQUELINE HUNT

WITH the first really warm spring days, superfluous hair becomes a problem that is uppermost in the minds of most women. Sheer hose, sleeveless frocks and shorts cause women no end of embarrassment, as it seems time to review the methods found most satisfactory for removing unwanted hair.

One must understand that depilatories are for only temporary removal of hair on the legs and arms. All of these preparations should be used according to the directions that accompany them. Both the cream depilatories and the hair-removing pads remove the hair at the skin surface without injuring the root in any way so after a week the hairs may be quite noticeable again.

The most lasting method of removing the hair temporarily is with one of the wax-type depilatories. These pull the hair from beneath the surface of the skin and therefore the regrowth is delayed for several weeks. Repeated use of the wax seems to weaken the growth of the hair.

The only permanent method of removing superfluous hair is by electrolysis, but this is seldom attempted over large areas. And it is not unless you have an operator who is skilled in this type of work.

Hospitals, usually, have on file the names of reputable operators in the nearest large city, so if you are considering having hair removed by this method, be sure to ask your doctor or the nearest hospital for the name of an expert.

Coarse hairs in small areas like the eyebrows or scattered hairs on the chin or upper lip are best removed by plucking. A very heavy growth of hair on the upper lip or chin can be removed by a new type of depilatory that was developed last summer.

The depilatories coming in paste or cream form are most widely used. The directions for their use always accompany them. You cannot expect to get satisfactory results from these preparations unless you follow the directions. Removal of hair is not sufficient for complete baldness where the hair is growing in a concentrated area. You also need a depilatory or anti-perspirant, but you must not use them too soon after using the hair removing agent, as the hair will usually be included in the directions to be very careful about getting any of the paste or cream on your fingernails. In the package there are usually little cotton swabs or wooden spatulas for applying the preparation that gets on the nails will cause nails to blister and break off.

In using the wax depilatories, be extra careful about following directions. The wax is usually heated and spread on the skin. It must not be too hot, or its removal will be tedious and the hairs will break off instead of being pulled out by their little bulbous roots. The warm wax should stay on the skin just long enough to relax the pores. Pull it off with a quick stroke against the direction of the hair's growth and your skin will be smooth and hair-free with a minimum of discomfort.

Speaking of Styles

Frills Take Season Invites Meals That Youth's Eye Suit the Vernal Spirit

By JUDITH WILSON

LATE April meals are colored by their wealth of delicious foods. Soup, soups, a salad of crisp greens, new peas and lima beans from farther South, tender lamb, broilers and light, sparkling desserts make you think that summer is just around the corner.

Your dress becomes springlike with a lavish garnish or water-crests or parsley or molds of spicily. You could ask nothing better than tender, perfectly cooked peas, beans or asparagus tips with a liberal dressing of butter, salt and pepper. Desserts may be warm if you wish, but the chilled variety are much prettier and more reasonable. Don't these recipes make your mouth water?

Such dresses may be bouffant but they have to be awfully grown-up round the neckline, which is a way of saving them. They will stand, these frivolous young people, for organdies and for net but they must be over rustling taffeta and they must have the very last word in detail.

The zest with which designers have set about creating clothes for women who are hot spectators but participants in sports would lead one to suppose that active sports for women were a new creation. Of course, such is not the case, but, for some reason, the creative mind has turned to the lively question of dressing women who fly, swim, bike or drive in such a manner as to insure comfort as well as chic.

Flying clothes are not a new development, at least not new this season, but my guess is that it's the air steward flyer who is most concerned with the how do I look phase of the adventure.

But stranger than the idea of designing flying clothes, is the idea of designing, and wanting, clothes in which to mount one's bike for a spin. Believe it or not, there is a lively interest in such clothes and many of them bow to tradition and in the matter of silhouette especially.

When cooking ham bone or other meat bones with vegetables follow this course. First cook the bones in water for an hour; then add the vegetables to this water and cook until tender.

A novel way for serving asparagus is to use a ring of lemon rind around several stalks. Now pour a hot lemon and butter sauce over the tips of each bouquet.

Did you know that fats, such as butter, margarine, lard, salt pork and vegetable oil are important energy foods?

Make a cup thick white sauce by blending 4 tablespoons each butter and flour and stirring in 1 cup milk. Add the yolk of 1 egg beaten until thick and lemon colored and 1 cup cooked cauliflower sliced fine. Cool and fold in the 4 egg whites beaten stiff. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. Serve at once with frizzled ham.

For the latter since cooked ham very thin and cut into strips. Soak until curly in butter or ham fat.

Get 1½ pounds of boned veal shoulder and have the meat cut into 1½-inch squares. Simmer slowly in 1½ quarts of water with 2 tablespoons minced onion, a bay leaf and 1½ teaspoons salt. When the liquid is reduced and the veal is nearly tender, add 1 cup shelled peas, 1 cup diced carrots and 1 cup of tiny white onions. Continue cooking until the vegetables are tender. Blend to a smooth paste 2 tea-spoons flour, a dash of pepper and 1 cup milk. Add to the mixture and cook until the gravy thickens.

Pour into a large casserole or cover with diamond shapes of the following pastry: Cut ¾ cup shortening into 2 cups flour and 1 teaspoon salt. Mix well 1 beaten egg and 5 tablespoons cold water. Add this to the first mixture. Roll out to ¼ inch thickness, cut into diamonds, prick and sprinkle with grated cheese. Lay over the meat and bake in a hot oven about 30 minutes, until the pastry is brown. Serve hot in the casserole.

MODERN WOMEN

Wife Is Advised to Take Herself in Hand for Her Own Good

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

JUDGING from the tenor of much of my mail wives are indulging in all sorts of imaginary ills. I know imaginary ones can be just as terrifying as real ones. That's why I think these ladies should exert every effort to find the cause, physical or otherwise, of their overwrought nervous system. The letter which follows is a good example of what I mean. Read it and see what you think.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: I am one of those women who are restless and dissatisfied. I can't help it. When life goes along like a song, it's monotonous to me. I like excitement and change and it's wrecking my marriage. My husband just doesn't understand me. I should be content, calls it all foolishness when I beg him to go away with me or to let me go away by myself. We have two children and while I love them they do get on my nerves terribly."

She Hates Housework
"They never seem to annoy my husband and he can't understand why they fret me so. I hate housework. We have a maid off to get a good maid for what we can afford to pay. I love my husband but I must say I do want to see other people and go places while I am still young enough to enjoy life."

"Do you think I am all to blame? I really try to settle down and I do try to find contentment but it doesn't seem to be for me. I am almost desperate. I feel I can't go on this way. What can I do to make him understand and sympathize?—Thirty-Four."

You are suffering from that vague complaint commonly called nerves. I can sympathize with you if your husband can't. I admit to feeling even more sorry for him for he is in a worse position. I am almost desperate. I feel I can't go on this way. What can I do to make him understand and sympathize?—Thirty-Four."

It is quite likely that it is a physical cause. I really feel that you should see your doctor. Doctors know a great deal more than medical books do. They are excellent psychologists. The guess is that a doctor who knows you, your attending physician, will be able to tell you just what is wrong and how to get about setting it right.

A restless disposition imposes a good deal of hardship on all who are affected by it. The chance are unfavorable. You may have been unmarried, but you may have been married and so might have gotten beyond control if you did not have a pleasant anchorage of husband, home and children.

Too Much Self Study
I certainly think that you have too much time, or give too much time, to thinking about yourself. Why not dispense with your maid, and buckle down to housework just to see whether a tired body isn't a pretty good cure for too active mind?

Busy people do not have time to speculate whether or not they are happy. Interest yourself in your children, even if they fret you. My guess is that they fret you because you have not taken the trouble to enter into their lives. You are annoyed by sulky contacts with them.

There should be a great deal to interest a mother with any mental capacity. By delving into their minds and trying to understand what makes them do this and so and why your reactions are so such and such you may become so interested that you will forget the dullness of your days.

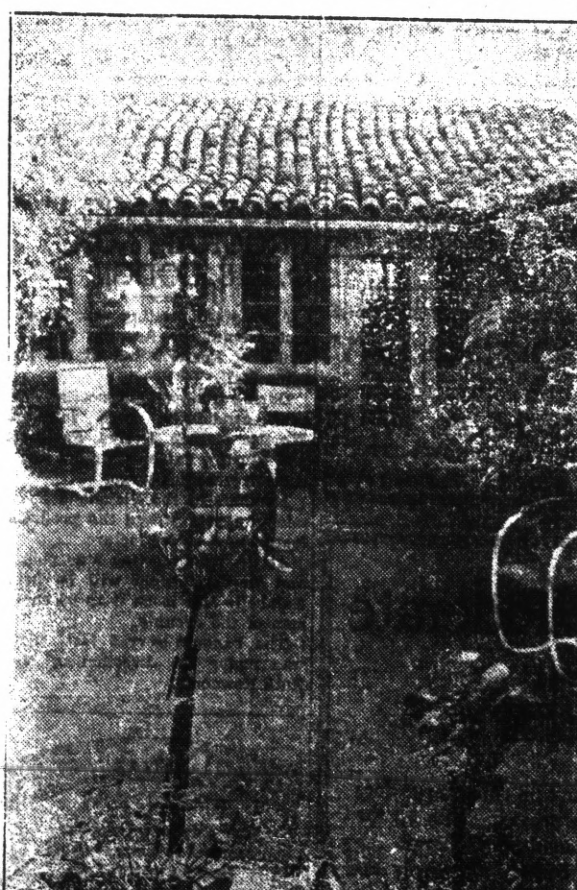

The trouble is undoubtedly in yourself, not in either your children or your husband, so you must take yourself in hand, if necessary with the aid of your physician in order that you get the right slant on life.

At present you only seem able to see yourself, which is not fair to your family. Don't indulge your moods or fancy that you are more interesting because you have them. Normal men and women, of getting the most out of life and of bringing the most happiness to others and therefore to themselves.

If you are not unreasonable in your demands I am sure your husband will not disapprove of your taking a little time out from your family duties and may even make an effort to accompany you on some expedition. But you must not be too exacting or expect him to neglect his routine. Put yourself together; don't expect any one to understand a woman who doesn't understand herself.

Mrs. Martin will be glad to answer in this column questions of general interest. Mrs. Martin can not reply individually to any correspondence. Names will not be published. Address her care of this page.

AN ATTRACTIVE TERRACE

Home builders are more and more including the screened terrace on the order of the Spanish patio. Here is a plan which may suggest comfort and beauty to those about to build or remodel. The tiled terrace, furnished with modern equipment, is more of a solace in hot weather than the old front porch.
